A Rin Tin Tin Double Feature

The Clash of the Wolves is a 1925 American silent Western/adventure film produced and distributed by Warner Bros. Directed by Noel M. Smith, the film stars canine actor Rin Tin Tin, Charles Farrell and June Marlowe. It was filmed on location in Chatsworth, California, at what would later become the Joshua Tree National Park. The Clash of the Wolves was deemed "culturally, historically, or aesthetically significant" by the United States Library of Congress and selected for preservation in the National Film Registry.

The Night Cry 1926 - A giant condor is killing sheep and Rinty is unjustly accused and by the law of the range must be destroyed. Rinty's owner hides him from the other ranchers. The condor steals a child and Rinty tracks it to its lair and destroys the giant bird. All the stories of how Rin-Tin-Tin could really act are substantiated in this film. The scene when Rinty returns home not knowing why his owner is angry with him has to be our favorite.

Jeff Raspsis will be taking his place to accompany the two features. There's a reason he will have no sheet music on his keyboard - it's because he'll be making up the music right there on the spot. And it won't be rinky-tink piano accompaniment. Raspsis, a New Hampshire-based musician and composer, will use a digital synthesizer to recreate the texture of the full orchestra, complete with pounding drums and clashing cymbals, all produced in real time by a traditional keyboard with 88 keys.
