"A Week's Stay at the Mt Washington Observatory" Presented by: Preston & Brenda Conklin

The Mt. Washington Observatory is a nonprofit organization whose members can volunteer to cook and clean for the staff in exchange for living atop the mountain for a week. Brenda & Preston Conklin spent two separate weeks volunteering atop Mt Washington in spring and in winter. Their presentation and pictures will cover history and weather, as well as life at the summit.

From the Mount Washington web site:

Living on top of a mountain in a real, working weather station is an incredibly unique experience. In addition to learning about our operations and getting to know the crew, volunteers are encouraged to sample all that Mount Washington has to offer. From hiking and skiing, to experiencing hurricane-force winds, white-out fog, breathtaking vistas, and everything in between, spending a week atop the Northeast's tallest peak is a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

The presentation will be at the Old Town Hall in Campton, which is handicap accessible, and open to the public. Refreshments will be served. For information about the Society, check our web site at www.camptonhistorical.org
