“Mt Washington Avalanche Center, our country's oldest avalanche forecasting operation.”

Presented by: Justin Preisendorfer

The Mount Washington Avalanche Center is operated by the US Forest Service and is our country's oldest public avalanche forecasting operation. In addition to forecasting the Center has the unique role of overseeing search and rescue operations in Tuckerman and Huntington Ravines during the snowy months of the year. Former snow ranger Justin Preisendorfer will incorporate video and photographs in his program which focuses on the evolution of the program and their current operations.

Justin Preisendorfer is a NH native who fell in love with the White Mountains at a young age. A close call in Tuckerman Ravine as a teenager made him decide to enhance his skills, give the mountains a little more respect, and pursue a career where he could share his love of the mountains. He worked as a snow ranger on Mount Washington for eight years before coming to work out of the Forest Service's Campton office.

The presentation will be at the Old Town Hall in Campton, which is handicap accessible, and open to the public. Refreshments will be served. For information about the Society, check our web site at www.camptonhistorical.org
