

"Cuba: Its People and Society Today"

Presented by: Alan and Carolyn Hill

There is much that Americans do not know about Cuban society today and what life is like for the average Cuban citizen. The presenters toured Havana, the capital city, and the surrounding area last Fall and will share what they learned about the people and their rich culture as well as insights on what the future might hold for the island nation.

Alan and Carolyn Hill are retired college professors who live in Campton. They are interested in Early American history, architecture and restoration. They were the original owners and restorers of the Colonel Spencer Inn and now reside in an 18th century, center-chimney cape which Alan designed and re-constructed from a local barn that had been destined for destruction.

The presentation will be at the Old Town Hall in Campton, which is handicap accessible, and open to the public. Refreshments will be served. For information about the Society, check our web site at www.camptonhistorical.org
